Commodity Pairs

Currency Code	Currency Pair	Minimum Spread (pips)	Average Spread (pips)

*Overnight rates on XTI, XBR and XNG are high since the swaps for these crosses are based on the price difference between the two (futures) front month costs. This is determined by the forward rate curve in that particular market.

The forward curve is determined more by supply/demand for the energy contracts rather than purely interest rates, so if there was a backwardation market, i.e. where the near month was trading higher than the far month then they would be paying on the swap. Also if the current curve was flatter i.e. less of a difference between the near and far months, then the swap cost would be much lower.
